Опис вакансії

Our client is a start-up that creates solutions for the tourism and travel industry. The company is currently developing two new products. One of them is a separate payment solution, which allows travelers to pay for a ticket or hotel room over several payments without having their credit history checked. The second solution is for guaranteeing the price of a purchased ticket. If the cost of the ticket is reduced to the reservation value, the user will receive a notification about the better price.

DataArt's team will write a module to interact with other system components, external data providers through REST and SOAP interfaces. A specialist who will take the position of Senior Python Engineer in this project will work on integrating the advisory engine into the corporate application for travel planning.
